

This article is composed of information from the Shopping For Spirit - The Search For Truth articles and includes new, additional information to help show the important role the 'memory' of water has played in the creation of what we call the astral reality, and how the consciousness/memory of this reality has permeated our spiritual and religious beliefs to such an extent, that today we believe this reality to be spiritual or divine in nature.

To appreciate the role the 'memory' of water plays in the scheme we call life, we first need to understand how all living things interact on an energy level, through the medium of water.

The following is taken from Part Five of the Shopping For Spirit series of articles: “In the book The Secret Life of Plants, Peter Tompkins and Christopher Bird chart some very interesting scientific developments relating to the consciousness of plants and the energy interaction and influence between all living things. It is an exciting discovery of how energies interplay with each other and which can directly or indirectly influence other living systems; discoveries which were so profound by their nature, they naturally aroused the interest of the intelligence agencies and the military in the 1950’s and 60’s in what may well have been the springboard for their respective present-day non-lethal weaponry - a unique way of influencing and controlling populations of people through radio and microwave radiation without causing a fuss or drawing untoward attention to their actions. [Could this be evidenced by the plethora of Mobile Phone Masts being erected everywhere at the moment?]”

“Tompkins and Bird start by looking at the work of Cleve Backster, one of America’s foremost lie detector examiners. Backster soon discovered by playing with his galvanometer and attaching electrodes to the leaves of plants, he could witness a response in plants to his own thoughts. Galvanised and excited by his findings, Backster started an intensive programme of research into the extraordinary perception of plants. He discovered that plants reacted not only to threats from humans, but also from other animals.¹ Backster’s investigations continued to establish if a plant had memory. He set up an experiment where six of his students, blindfolded, drew lots from a hat. On one piece of paper only were the instructions to actually damage the plant. Two plants were used; one was duly damaged by the student acting on the instructions on the piece of paper and the other plant acted as a witness to the event. Backster showed that the surviving plant gave no reaction to five of the six students, but whenever the actual culprit approached it, it reacted and caused the meter to go wild.² Backster had effectively demonstrated that plants have memory.

“Backster went on to extend his field of investigation into mould cultures, scrapings from the human mouth, blood cells, and even sperm. The results were just as interesting as those he discovered with plants, and sperm cells were quite uncanny in the way they seemed capable of identifying their own donor.³ After further experiments his findings were published in 1968 in the International Journal of Parapsychology.⁴ Backster’s work was providing a foundation of belief that there was some form of cellular consciousness common to all living things.

“Other scientists followed up on Backster’s work with their own experiments and one, Sauvin found he could control his model train set or even start his car engine by transferring his thoughts to a plant while the plant was connected to the device in question.⁵ Sauvin went on to show that this phenomenon could be repeated by controlling the flight of model aeroplanes. By transmitting thoughts to a plant Sauvin could start, stop or alter the speed of a model plane in flight.⁶

“As more and more of these scientific experiments and their startling results were written up in journals all over the world, more scientists became involved in similar research programmes. Vogel was one and reasoned that there was a ‘psychic energy’ at play and that this energy was storable.⁷ Vogel noticed that leaves with a large electrical resistance were especially difficult to work with, though fleshy leaves with high water content were best.⁸ He concluded that man can and does communicate with plant life and that plants are living objects, sensitive and rooted in space. They radiate energy, which one can feel as they feed this energy into our own force field which in turn feeds back energy to the plant.⁹

“In other parts of the world similar experiments were being undertaken which led to developing the use of radio frequencies to stimulate the growth of plants. In 1970, L. George Lawrence read that in the Ukraine, radio frequencies and ultrasonic vibrations had been used to stimulate cereal grain seeds to produce higher yields as far back as the 1930’s.¹⁰ In 1970, Pravda published an article by professor Ivan Issidorovitch Gunar, head of the Academy’s Department of Plant Physiology, which confirmed the presence of electrical impulses in plants, similar to nerve impulses in humans. This report concluded similar findings, which proved there was communication between plants and humans, and a plant’s reaction to human intent – be it love or hate – through calmness or fear.¹¹

“There have to date, been numerous experiments and tests which demonstrate clearly how plants and vegetables do react to pain, emotion and love. Experiments continued in many areas of the world on the effects of not only thought/emotion upon the consciousness of plants, but the effect of other vibrations and sounds such as music and ultrasonics.

“Tompkins and Bird go on to describe an eight week experiment carried out on summer squashes by broadcasting music to them in their respective chambers from two Denver radio stations. One station specialised in heavy rock and the other in classical music. Those squashes exposed to Hayden et al, grew towards the transistor radio, one of them twisting itself lovingly around it. The other squashes, subjected to the rock music all grew away from the radio and even tried to climb the walls of their glass cage. Similar tests were carried out on other plants and vegetables with the same results. Rock music proved to be detrimental to the well being of living matter, whilst classical music proved to be beneficial.¹⁴

“Other tests, report Tompkins and Bird, show that for example, Mimosa pudica, which naturally fold their leaves as darkness falls, showed that even if kept in a darkened room the leaves would still ‘close’ as the sun was setting. Which, Jean-Jacques Dertous de Mairan concluded, meant plants must be able to sense the energy of the sun without being able to see it.¹⁵

“This knowledge of the interaction of energies between plants, vegetables, humans, sound and vibration led to further experiments whereby the yield of crops, vegetable or fruit, could be greatly enhanced when stimulated with energy frequencies of the right nature. Joseph Molitovisz invented an ‘electrical flower pot’ which could keep flowers much longer than is normally possible.¹⁶ Over time this knowledge led to the use of radio broadcasting for removing pests from agricultural land – a totally pesticide and chemically free form of eradication...

“A company was set up called U.K.A.C.O. Inc. to relieve farmers of unwanted pests and to increase their crop yields. This process was so successful that when insecticide salesmen visited the farms under treatment, they were informed their products were no longer required. This upset the American insecticide industry to the extent they ridiculed U.K.A.C.O. Inc. by calling them fraudsters and charlatans.¹⁷ In the early 1950’s pressure was put on the government to stamp out this new method of pest control as it severely threatened the profits and therefore the position of the insecticide industry as a whole. Sounds like a familiar story. All the resulting pressure and smear campaigns from government and industrial big shots finally forced U.K.A.C.O. Inc. to close its doors.¹⁸ Ego and fear (greed) had won the day once again. Also in the 1950’s the De La Warrs were achieving remarkably similar results in improving crop yields with their ‘black boxes’²³, and similar episodes were occurring on both sides of the Atlantic throughout the 1960’s and 70’s...”

“This is how energies work and every living thing, be it plant, vegetable, animal or human, is composed of the very same energy - Spirit, God, Oneness, Source or whatever label we would like to attach to it – and it is only the way this energy animates the biochemical aspect of this existence that makes living entities different in appearance. We are all one with nature and nature is all one with us. However, due to the Fall of Humans, both in consciousness (soul) and awareness, we no longer have that conception of the overall we, the belonging to and being a part of the collective WE. We now look at life from the singular aspect of the ego, the ego of I, the I AM PRESENCE, and we view life as being composed of individual and separate entities, ourselves included, and so we do not see or feel the plant or animal as an extension of ourselves, or as being one with us. Instead through ego, we now see all life outside of us as being separate, and therefore alien to us. All consciousness is one, we are everything and everything is one. Consciousness just IS...[It is only the intellect and the ego that sees itself as being separate from, and even superior to, the rest of nature, feeling the need for some form of supernatural being to come and save us from our belief-induced-sins.]

“Some cultures, especially the Eastern ones, have taken this understanding of collective life-force energy and extended it to the way in which they prepare food. In China for example, many animals are kept alive until just before they are about to be cooked and eaten, with the belief this will feed more life-force energy (Chi) from the animal into the human that then consumes the meat or fish. This would be correct if animals were treated with love and respect. However, when animals or fish are kept in cramped and distressed conditions or environments, then the animals or fish will naturally feel frightened and/or confused. This is the very same unbalanced and fear-based energy that this so-called wisdom feeds back into the people who eat this emotionally distressed food – and so we continue to mistreat animals.

“Following the above considerations, it may be time for vegetarians to extend their views on the ill treatment of animals to cover plants, vegetables and fruits also. This awareness of consciousness and feeling/emotion, which transcends all living matter, provokes a completely new paradigm of thinking regarding our health, spirituality and the way we nourish the physical body. As Vogel discovered, plants with a higher water content responded emotionally the most and as we have discovered throughout these articles, water is consciousness in this physical reality, because water stores information and most importantly water stores emotions – fear-based or love-based...” Please see Healing Energy and Water and Shopping For Spirit Articles Part 3 onwards for a more in-depth study of the memory of water and its role in spiritual and physical health."

The human body is composed of over three-gallons of water and so we humans are highly emotional too, and therefore, very receptive to other external influences and energies! [Conspiracy theorists please note the possibility of microwave mind-control through the plethora of phone masts being erected around the world] The Earth and its atmosphere is made up of around 70-80% water too, and so the Earth (its consciousness) is one huge ‘memory bank’ of stored information and emotion from the beginnings of time. In this respect the Earth is the Akashic Records and we can tap into this ‘memory’ at any time because it is all around us. The Universe too is replete with water which is how we can extend our consciousness (soul/awareness) anywhere we choose to – as some people do when remote viewing a distant entity for example. However, I must point out that from my own experiences I believe that this external travelling puts our soul/consciousness at great risk of possession by lost souls and these external imbalanced entities/though-forms we have created over time.

Our thoughts and beliefs affect the consciousness/energy of everything around us because almost everything is replete with water. For example, we may go to the finest organic restaurant in town, but if the Chefs and their staff are in a bad mood, then that ‘emotion/energy’ will be passed into the food that they prepare. We, by consuming the food, then ‘absorb’ that energy/memory/emotion, or can become aware of it. This applies to all processed food that we find available today. There is no escaping this.

Because water stores energy/emotion/information from ALL sources, therefore our emotions, thoughts, beliefs etc., ARE automatically stored externally in the watery environment (consciousness) of the Earth and beyond! Therefore, by looking externally outside of oneself for the answers to religion/spirituality and so forth, coupled with opening up our protective energy field (auric/biophysical field) as is taught in many religious/spiritual/new age beliefs and healing modalities today, we are not doing ourselves any favours at all. All we are doing is allowing the external imbalance in consciousness – memory/information – that we have created over time to enter our otherwise protective energy field and thus affect our own consciousness according to the level of imbalance taken on board. This external ego-consciousness, as I call it, is what many people today would understand better as being the Astral Reality; it is the Veil, Shadow or Darkness that we have created over time which sits between our inner spiritual light and our conscious awareness of who and what we truly are.

The way our consciousness/soul is affected by these attached ‘memories’ we take on board from our intellectual and meditative connection with this external ego-consciousness is similar to how recipients of donor organs are affected by the ‘consciousness’ of the dead donor that remains in the transplanted organ. Even when we begin to look within, following the ‘inner journey’, the first thing we come across is this astral imbalance, which we have been interacting with for all of our lives. Taken from Shopping For Sprit Part Seven, “In a recent terrestrial T.V. program on organ transplants, it was shown that the recipient of the donor organ, in many cases, had undergone a change in personality. One young girl was describing how she kept seeing and feeling the death of this young child, being able to describe quite graphically how the child had been bludgeoned to death. When these unusual circumstances were checked out, the young girl’s experience described exactly how the ‘donor child’ had died.

“Another ‘organ donor recipient’ at a gathering, went up to a lady and said ‘Hi mom, it’s good to see you.’ The lady turned out to be the mother of the ‘organ donor’ and the ‘recipient’ had immediately recognised her as the ‘donor’s’ mother. Another was where the personality of a middle-aged man completely changed. A man who used to suffer from stress and become angry when stressed, now found he carried out housework when he was stressed, something he never did before he received the heart of a female donor. And there are so many similar cases of this type of occurrence. This happens simply because the ‘consciousness’ of the donor is retained in the donor organ and its memory, or identity, has been placed within the body of the recipient and, therefore, his or her consciousness, and is thus able to express itself by sharing its ‘consciousness/memory’ with that of the recipient – even well after the death of the ‘donor’.

“Research recently published in the Journal Of Near-Death Studies, conducted by Professor Gary Schwartz, Professor Paul Pearsall and Dr Linda Russek, of the universities of Arizona and Hawaii, confirmed that people who have organ transplants could inherit the habits of their donors. Their findings are very similar to those experiences detailed above. One male who received a woman’s heart had a new passion for the colour pink, a colour he had previously hated. He also had a newly acquired taste for women’s perfume. Similarly, a woman who received a heart and lung transplant developed cravings for chicken nuggets, a food she never ate. Uneaten chicken nuggets were found in the jacket of the young male donor when he was killed. It goes on and on in the same vein, with alterations in people’s sense of smell, food preferences and emotions, to changes in tastes of music.”

“It is the same with ‘attached’ memories we find in our energy fields as a result of intellectually connecting with, and opening ourselves up to, this external consciousness for the answers. Just as the consciousness, memory and personality of the ‘donor’ can influence the ‘recipient’ of the donated organ, the consciousness, emotion and personality of the ‘attached’ memory (often referred to as an entity/lost soul etc., and also mistakenly being classed by many people as being Spirit Guides) can likewise affect the ‘host’s’ consciousness and personality. This leads to us ‘behaving totally out of character’ and provoking comments such as ‘that is just not you’, ‘why are you behaving like that’, as we can at times begin to behave in the ‘likeness’ of the consciousness of the energy body ‘attached’ to our energy fields.

“Similarly, like the ‘recipient’ of the donor organ can experience images and memories of the dead donor’s life, depending on the type of energy attachment, we can also experience the emotion and past life events of this ‘entity’ as it shares its consciousness and memory with us. Awareness of these entities emotions and past life events is enhanced through regressive hypnotherapy as this process allows more of the imbalanced thought-forms ‘memory’ or consciousness to come through into our own consciousness. This is, of course, not a wise thing to do because the entity’s imbalance can then have a greater effect within our own consciousness as we take this on board on a more conscious level, and we can then begin to think, experience and behave more in the likeness of the ‘thought-form consciousness’ than in the likeness of our true selves. This can lead to some people actually believing that they have lived in a previous lifetime. This is probably where the belief in reincarnation comes from. For a fuller explanation of reincarnation and past-life experiences, please read Shopping For Spirit Part 7 and in particular, Part 8 and 9. See Articles.

If our soul/consciousness becomes imbalanced on a subliminal level due to our connection with the external reality or our belief that this reality represents some form of spiritual truth, then we can produce energy products with the right intellectual intent of helping people, yet at the very core of these products we will find that this imbalance in soul/consciousness we have personally taken on board is actually imparted into the product/s we produce as well. This can create what appears to be a thin energy-veneer on the outside of the product, which may appear all singing and all dancing, but the core and the essence of the energy/consciousness of the product is one of imbalance, representing the external ego-consciousness. Some energy products that I have worked with can, and do, I believe, actually connect us with this imbalanced external ego-consciousness (astral reality) by opening up our protective energy fields, and/or by imparting this core energy/consciousness/programming into our own consciousness/soul.

The ‘memory’ of water - its ability to store and share information - is the key to explaining and understanding many of today’s so-called esoteric mysteries, especially ‘past-life’ experiences. As the Universe is replete with water, and the Earth much more so, the ‘memory’ of water also explains how the Astral Reality (Veil/Shadow) has been created over time by our imbalanced thoughts and beliefs, our fears, and the need of our ‘leaders’ to control people through ego and greed. It has been due to these imbalanced thoughts and desires of our lawmakers over time and the beliefs they have imposed upon us to control us that we have collectively (as a species) created this imbalanced external reality, and as time has progressed, this astral reality has grown even more powerful; to such an extent, that it is now much more influential in controlling our belief systems today.

Throughout history FEAR has always been a means to control people and keep our lawmakers in power. Today, it is the fear of terrorism, and the solution is our leaders’ fight against this ‘world evil’. In the past, our leaders used the fear of God, and then fear of the Devil to control people, with the man-created monotheistic God (not the true Creator God) offering people salvation and a means of escaping the Devil’s evil clutches. Polytheistic beliefs, and most importantly, our natural communication with, and understanding of, Nature were virtually wiped out. The true Creator is symbolically the Father of the Spiritual Light, the Virginal Spirit, that animates all living things, whom we cannot see, whom we can only experience, let alone meet on a mountain or anywhere else.

This spiritual deception kept our leaders in power and in control of the people. As more people came to, or were forced to, believe that this astral god was a real god, this ‘thought-form’ (psychic) god became an even more powerful, influential and ‘fluidic’ memory in the external consciousness of the Earth and beyond (astral reality). Belief in this ‘reality’ grew as more people began to channel and share information from it. Just like the prophets of old did, with their ‘channelled information’ eventually leading to the creation of what we recognise today as the main religions of the Western and Middle regions of the world. So powerful has this reality become through storing our collective fears, thoughts and beliefs, that today, with billions of people believing in this thought-form god and its multi-faceted reality (numerous false angels and supernatural beings), this human-created ego-reality has become a very powerful ‘memory’ indeed. Today, this external ego-created consciousness – perceived by so many as spiritual or divine - permeates the Qabala, Freemasonry, the Occult, Theosophy, the new age movement; various healing modalities, and many religious, spiritual and E.T. based beliefs, philosophies, ceremonies and rituals.

As a consequence of this astral reality that our ancestral lawmakers created - which we continue to feed today through our various beliefs, rituals and ceremonies - and the multitude of false realities and beliefs this reality has broadcast (channelled) over time into the human psyche, today, the majority of human beings have no present memory, or recollection, of the true God of Creation that lies beyond these man-created (astral) Heavens. The Creator God, who we do not see, let alone meet on a mountain, in a dream or meditation, and have conversations with: Information taught to the people thousands of years before Christianity re-created the (Jesus) Christ myth with similar teachings; information that our ancestral Gnostics, from many cultures, taught too. In effect, we have lost the ability to recognise, and most importantly, access the true inner Spiritual Light that animates all living things and us humans. Instead, we have been hoodwinked into looking externally into the false light of the astral god for our spiritual and religious inspiration and salvation.

All of this religious and spiritual deception happened because water stores and shares information from, and with, ALL living entities. Therefore, all our beliefs, fears, hopes, imaginations and thoughts have been stored in the Earth’s consciousness and beyond, and these ‘memories’ are then shared (reflected) back to us on a soul/consciousness (subliminal) level through our natural interaction with everything around us. Living entities with a high-water content, such as human beings, are more easily influenced by this external reality, and as a consequence, readily buy into its deception becoming ‘Channellers’ of so-called spiritual wisdom. This is how the astral ‘disease’ in consciousness is spread and we humans today continue to make the same mistakes as our ancestors. This is why we are witnessing an increase in crime, social disorder, violence, drug abuse, child abuse, unnecessary wars and so forth, as it appears the world is degenerating into chaos rather than evolving into spiritual harmony.

Thus, when we tap into this external ego-reality through whatever means, we take on board and store the imbalance on a subliminal/subconscious/soul level. Then, irrespective of our intent, or how intellectually sound our reasoning may be, this imbalance is shared as a subliminal ‘message/memory’ with whatever energy products we produce, our teachings, books, seminars and persona. It is this ‘inner’ memory/consciousness/programming taken on board from the astral reality that some people can actually tune into, and in some cases people can mistakenly judge these attached memories to be spirit guides here to help us.

Over time, this false spiritual reality has become so powerful and influential in creating our belief systems that the irony today is we humans are virtually being completely controlled by our own creation – the psychic astral god and its multi-faceted reality of Hierarchal supernatural beings.

Water's memory = our Spiritual illusion!

Water reflects our past mistakes back to us so we can learn from them, not so we can take them on board as some form of so-called spiritual truth, make money, feed our egos, and in so doing, continue to spread this disease in consciousness. We've just forgotten that's all.
